THE PATAGONIAN ADVENTURE IN CHILE AND ARGENTINA

13 days / 12 nights

Patagonia is the region at the southern end of South America shared by Argentina and Chile. On this region you will find Andes Mountains, lakes, fjords and glaciers as well as deserts, tablelands and steppes. The name Patagonia comes from the word patagón. Magellan used this term in 1520 to describe the native tribes of the region, whom his expedition thought to be giants. The people he called the Patagons are now believed to have been the Tehuelche, who tended to be taller than Europeans of the time.

Patagonia is one of the most interesting places in South America and is thought to be kept as natural as possible, therefore, all efforts made to reach this goal, make tourism a bit expensive but worth a visit.

WE will start our visit in Santiago de Chile getting prepared for this amazing adventure. Fly to Punta Arenas, the gate to the Chilean Patagonia and start your journey visiting its glaciers and lakes. The magical spectacle that the Torres del Paine massif offers, has allowed the visitor to understand why this place has been declared by the UNESCO as a Biosphere Reserve. Between the Patagonian steppe and the Cordillera de los Andes this paradise of wildlife and vegetation hide valuable treasures to be discovered and visited. After we learned about the wonders of this area, we will cross the border to Argentina and learn about the villages of El Chalten and El Calafate, in the vicinity of Mount Fitz Roy and the Perito Moreno Glacier to end in Buenos Aires with a wonderful Tango Show. Come with us and live your adventure in the Patagonia!

DAY 1 (Saturday) SANTIAGO

After your international flight, arrival in Santiago from home and reception by your guide at the airport in Santiago. Transfer to your hotel in downtown Santiago. Check-in and free time for private activities until your late afternoon tour begins. Departing from your hotel, the city downtown awaits you. Proceed through the main avenue of the city, Alameda del Libertador General Bernardo O'Higgins, passing by the San Francisco Church, the oldest monument of the country erected in 1568 housing a convent, miraculously withstanding several earthquakes. Start off by visiting the Santa Lucía Hill, where the Spanish conquistador Pedro de Valdivia founded the city on February 12th, 1541. After a quick visit to its top, descend to visit the Lastarria Neighborhood, located right below the hill. This recently renovated neighborhood houses little cute cafés, exquisite restaurants and a couple of museums worth visiting (time permitting). From here, you will be taken to the La Moneda Palace, nowadays the neoclassical style government palace, but originally constructed to house the Mint of the Spanish Crown during the 18th century. A few blocks away, walk along Paseo Ahumada until reaching Plaza de Armas (The Main Square). When Pedro de Valdivia founded Santiago in 1541, he laid out this square as the heart of the newly-formed city. This bustling spot houses the oldest buildings of the capital: the Cathedral Church of Santiago, rebuilt in 1748 on the same site where all four previous churches were destroyed by fires and earthquakes, the Central Post Office and the National Historical Museum, the former "Real Audiencia" or Spanish Royal Court. A little further, cross the Mapocho River and head straight towards the Bellavista Neighbourhood, a lively place, core of the night and artistic life, where pubs, cultural centers and international gastronomy can be found.
